

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

I feel that the politicalization of our media is a grave threat to our democracy and strongly urge that the FCC take the necessary action to forstall this blatent misuse of an American broadcasting system.
